Mother Discovers Fire.

When Mrs. Breslin returned she heard presidents. her children screaming, and saw flames through a parlor window. Seized with terror, the mother called for help.

W. T. Holloran, grocer at Fourth and K streets northwest, was passing in a buggy. He ran past Mrs. Breslin, forced open the front door, and entered the hallway. He was staggered by the smoke. He pressed forward in the dark. He could hear the flames crackling and the cries of the children, while from the street came the appeals of the mother-"Save my babies."

Holloran entered the room. He groped about for the children. The heat almost overcame him, and the smoke stifled him. He was about to retreat when he stumbled against a tiny foot protruding from under a bed. Feeling beneath the bed, he found the boys, Thomas and Samuel, lying in each other's arms. They had sought the safest place in the room.

Holloran pulled the boys from beneath made for the door. He reached the yesterday. door, stumbled through the hallway, and passed through the front door to the street, Mrs. Breslin gave a cry of delight. Then

When he came out of the house he ran into the back yard. Standing in the middle of a brick path, with a grimy, little fist wiping away tears, stood Mary Breslin, safe but badly frightened. The stranger caught the child in his arms, ran through the house, and carried the baby to her mother. Mrs. Breslin hugged the child to her breast and nearly swooned.

By this time 100 persons were about the house. John Holloran, father of W. T. Holloran, had procured buckets from his son's store and was carrying water from the kitchen to the front hallway, where full in many newspapers. several helpers were throwing the water into the parlor.

Morgan Arranged Conference.

Incident to the conference, it became known that the visit of the railroad presidents to the White House was arranged for by J. P. Morgan when he was in Washington last Friday. When President Taft was in New York last Thursday for the purpose of attending the wedding of his niece, Miss Louise Taft, a suggestion came to the President that Mr. Morgan would like to talk with him before Mr. Taft's departure for Washington. However, this was not feasible, and it was agreed that Mr. Morgan should call on the President in Washington at his earliest opportunity. Mr. Morgan left New York Thursday night shortly before the departure of the President and called on the President at the White House at 8:30 o'clock on Friday

At that interview the President and Mr. for the flames had not reached the bed. Morgan had a brief discussion of the proposed changes in the interstate commerc law, and the arrangement was made which resulted in the visit of the six the bed, caught one in each arm, and railroad presidents to the White House

The President has construed this order of the Senate as notice that the Senate feels capable of drafting its own measures, and, therefore, if either House wants to see the bills prepared, it will have to apply for them of its own volition at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue.

Senator Tillman once referred to a coleague who presented a measure drawn under Mr. Roosevelt's direction as "a spaniel Senator who retrieved this bill from the White House." Mr. Taft apparently does not care to have any spaniel Senators on his staff.

Until yesterday it was the President's intention to deal with the subjects of the anti-trust law and interstate commerce Commission. The anti-trust law and interstate commerce with the railroad presidents, he found that the revision of presidents, he found that the revision of money frequently necessary, to conform to the modifications promised the railroad men, might require promised the railroad men, might require why, in their opinion, it should be eliminated to the railroad presidents and the presidents are conformed to the modifications why, in their opinion, it should be eliminated that the revision of the railroad men, might require why, in their opinion, it should be eliminated that the recommerce portion in the secondary education that will be additional issues of stocks or bonds, until the North Atlantic and Middle Atlantic states and Morth Carolina the weather Tuesday will be generally fair and much colder which additional issues of stocks or bonds, until the North Atlantic and Middle Atlantic states and Morth Carolina the weather Tuesday will be generally fair and much colder with a continued cold Wedgedsy. Nothing appeared, however, to indicate that the President ntended to make any change in the provision which the railroad men found so objectionable.

Objection was made also to those features of the President's bill compelling competing carriers to unite in fixing a through rate and giving shippers the right to designate routes over which their hipments shall be carried. There were bjections to the provisions giving to the Interstate Commerce Commission the right to postpone the date when a new rate of classification shall take effect and the right to suspend, modify, or annul changes in rules or regulations regarded by the commission as imposing undue burdens on the shippers.

Raise More Objections

Another thing proposed which met criticism was the proposed provision requir- Asheville, N. C ... served as carriers. It has been maintained that the shipper should ascertain this information for himself from the rate and classification sheets and not subject a railroad agent, many of whom are merely ticket sellers and baggage men, to a fine for making an error. While it was gathered that some verbal changes will be made to make these provisions clearer, the understanding was obtained that the modifications will not be material. It is understood that if any determined effort is made by the administration to put through this proposed interstate commerce legislation at the current session of Congress, the big railroad companies will not unite in making a strenuous opposition, as they did at the time the railway rate amendatory measure was under consideration by Congress in 1906. They will present arguments, it was said, but go no further unless Congress calls on them for additional enlightenment. Anti-Trust Message with Printers. The text of President Taft's anti-trust niessage, which will be presented to Congress on Thursday, was sent to the Government Printing Office yesterday afternoon to have copies printed for distribution. It will give the President's reasons for believing no amendments to the Sherman law are necessary, but legislation supplementary to the law should be enacted providing for Federal incorporation of interstate corporations, except railroads. A bill has been drawn by Attorney General Wickersham embodying the ideas advocated by the President in his message. The President will urge that Congress enact a law prescribing conditions under which corporations may obtain certificates In their conference with President Taft of incorporation from the Department of Commerce and Labor to do an interstate strenuous treatment to which they had the administration view, before a cer-

DR. NEEDHAM FAVORS STAND FOR CLERKS

Increase in Salaries Indorsed by University President.

RAISES IMPORTANT QUESTION

Declares Meager Salaries of Government Employes Make It Impossible to Give Children Higher Education, Capt. Banks Voices Calm Judgment of Hundreds of Disinterested Ones.

From all sides comes approval of the campaign instituted by The Washington Herald to obtain for employes in the classified government service such revision in salary scale as meritorious work and the changed economic condition brought about by advance in the price of ecessities demands.

The problem of the government employe whose salary is determined by a basis of remuneration in force since 1853, or for fifty-seven years, is an interesting one to the student of economics and sociology. And from whatever point of view the question is approached, the argument is n favor of more money for those in the lassified service.

President C. W. Needham, of George Washington University, addressing the North Washington Citizens' Association last evening, gave utterance to sentiments trict, and by all of those present at the

In expressing his views, Dr. Needham said there was no other place in the country more in need of industrial education along the lines of agriculture and the mechanic arts, than in Washington. "There are in this city great numbers of government clerks and employes who exist on salaries ranging from about $900 to $2,500. They are so absolutely tied down by expenses that their children, in thou sands of cases, are deprived of the educa tion that must fit them for future life. When they go out in the world, they will have to face the trained graduates of State and private universities. At all times they will be handcapped by a lack of higher education to fit them for big positions, because their parents could not afford to send them to college."

Owing to the numerous appeals from students' families and citizens of Washington, George Washington University the speaker declared, has founded branches in agriculture and mechanical The President, however, indicated he Taft on Friday morning there was a may be had for the masses of the people, who cannot afford to spend money for a college degree.
